

From: Alan Leiman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 12/10/01 7:21am
Subject: to little

From what I've been reading Microsoft is getting off pretty easy compared to what should be done. They are continuing to push others around and control us, the consumers. If they get off to easy they won't stop. Look at there new product, i realize it wasn't part of the case, but they are forcing people to use there email account for registration, and when you create that account you have to use there email client. You gotta put the foot down so they realize that some things can't be done. And, that they have to leave the doors open for choice, and not use there muscle to push others around.